Mayor Malik D. Evans

Fun is in the air this spring!

It's finally time to shake off the winter chills and discover a new and fun adventure. Perhaps you're a budding chef ready to dive into the culinary arts. Maybe the step and dance team is calling your name, or the softball team is drawing you up to bat. City of Rochester R-Centers provide endless opportunities to make friends and have fun.

Before I became the Commissioner of the City's Department of Recreation and Human Services, I was a kid who attended Rochester's recreation centers and I can tell you, those times are some of my fondest memories and they can be yours too.

Gather your family together and flip through these pages to find something special for each one of you to enjoy.

Commissioner Shirley J. A. Green

Skateboarding is alive and well in the City of Rochester

GET ON

Like many products from the youth counterculture of previous generations, skateboarding has rolled into the mainstream, but with a gnarly grace all its own.

From humble beginnings when children created a new toy by mounting wooden boards onto salvaged roller-skate wheels to the gravity-defying stunts conceived by rebellious surfers in the empty pools of drought-stricken Southern California, skateboarding has grown into a multi-billion-dollar sport on the world stage.

And the City of Rochester is well on board.

As a component of the ongoing ROC the Riverway waterfront revitalization program, the City completed the first phase of the ROC City Skatepark in 2020 and is actively working to complete the next two phases by the end of 2026. The response so far, to say the least, has exceeded expectations (at least to those outside of the local skateboarding community).

Almost every day, in just about any weather during all available hours, skateboarders of all skill levels converge on the Skatepark in droves to face down their fear of falling with the finesse of flying. To attract more city youth to this increasingly popular sport, the City Recreation and Youth Services unit is partnering with leading players among Rochester's skateboarding scene to offer introductory and skill-building workshops in City

R-Centers.

"We have already invested millions of dollars in our Skatepark, and we're investing millions more on future phases, all to answer a demand that comes directly from the community we serve," said Dr. Shirley Green, Commissioner of the Department of Recreation and Human Services. "That tells you this is a fun activity that people want to engage in, so we want to make that activity available to all our kids. But if we're going to do that, just like we do with all our programs, we're going to sprinkle a little bit of learning in with that fun."

The "Learn to Skateboard" workshops are taught by volunteers from Friends of the Roc City Skatepark and Rolling Resettlement. They incorporate a curriculum developed by Skateistan, an international Non-Governmental Organization that seeks to introduce the sport to at-risk BIPOC and migrant communities to build diversity, equity, inclusion and resilience.

More than 400 young people across seven R-Centers have participated in the workshops over the past two years and two R-Centers will host workshops during the Spring programming season.

Michael Riordan, President of Friends of the ROC City Skatepark, said the volunteers love sharing the joy of skateboarding with city youth. Not only is it good for the sport, it's good for young people because skateboarding develops tools to navigate life on and off the board, including physical fitness, social engagement and mental toughness.

"Falling down and getting back up is literally something skateboarders are proud of and look forward to because they know it's the only way to get better at something they love," he said, adding that the workshops emphasize safe falling techniques and properly fitted protective gear.

And, despite the solo nature of the sport, Riordan said, skateboarding teaches teamwork and promotes conflict avoidance because skateboarders tend to gravitate to the same skate spots, where they take turns on the features and encourage each other to keep trying.

"Skateboarding is a lifestyle with its own etiquette that stretches across borders and cultures and even languages," he said. "You can bring your skateboard anywhere in the world and make a new friend."

How does your garden grow?

Frederick Douglass R-Center Garden

Over the past 4 years we have dramatically increased the productivity of the garden at the Frederick Douglass R-Center by adding fruit bearing trees and berries bushes that produce an abundance of food in addition to many beneficial plants that attract a diversity of wildlife to the space and support soil health and pollination. It is now used daily by the R-Center and School 12 for environmental programming and exploration. The garden won the Environmental Leadership Award at the 2023 GVRPS Conference.

Rochester Animal Services

184 Verona St. • 428-7274

Rochester Animal Services (RAS) is committed to serving people and animals to create safe neighborhoods, support the human-animal bond, and save and enhance animal lives.

Visit AnimalServices@cityofrochester.gov.

Sat. - Mon., 12 to 3 p.m., Tue. - Thu., 12 - 6 p.m. Closed Friday.

Note: Closed the third Tuesday of every month for training.

Become a foster caregiver: Foster caregivers are especially needed. Foster homes are healthier and more comfortable environments than shelters and reduce overcrowding in the shelter. The foster-to-adopt option also allows families to determine if the pet is a good fit in the household before committing long-term. Those interested in fostering a pet can learn more at cityofrochester.gov/FosterAPet.

Adopt an animal from the shelter: Adoptions not only help the animals at the shelter, but also offer new owners unconditional love, physical and mental health benefits, and a solution to loneliness. For more on pet adoption, visit cityofrochester.gov/PetAdoption.

Help lost pets get home without them coming to the shelter: Most lost pets are found within one mile of home. We are asking finders to assist when they encounter a friendly, healthy lost pet, before bringing the animal to the shelter. Learn how you can help at cityofrochester.gov/FoundAPet.

Become a Lost Pet Detective: Speaking of helping lost pets get home, RAS is looking for City residents willing to serve as lost pet detectives. As a neighborhood lost pet detective, you can assist and support neighbors while walking them through the steps to get lost pet's home. You will receive training, a microchip scanner, and lawn sign identifying you as a resource in your neighborhood. More at: cityofrochester.gov/article.aspx?id=21474851490.

If you've lost a pet:

Please visit our lost pet page for reunification tips at cityofrochester.gov/LostAPet.

Proactively register your pet at Petco Love Lost:

Petco Love Lost is an amazing tool that uses facial recognition technology and can help reunite you and your pet quicker. RAS recommends all pet parents register their pets just in case they go lost. Learn more and register your pet at lost.petcolove.org.

Volunteer:

Rochester Animal Services volunteers are essential to the success of the organization. Our volunteers help to enhance quality of life for animals at the shelter and support all aspects of the operation. Learn more and sign up at cityofrochester.gov/RASvolunteer.
